Re: Universal v. Nintendo

Dear Tom:

In response to the request in your letter of May 31, the following figures represent monies received by Universal or Merchandising Corporation of America to date:

1. Coleco-$4,680,613.48

2. Atari-$55,273

3. Tiger(U.S. only)

Atari Cartridge-$25,230.99

Tabletop Game-$7,724.22

Hand-held Game-$8,734.20

As you have represented to us that Nintendo is not pursuing a copyright infringement claim based on Tiger's quartz game clock, no royalties on sales of that product are indicated. In addition to the above, Merchandising Corporation of America received a $15,000 advance from Tiger in February, 1983 in connection with the renewal of its license.

4. Ruby-Spears-$1300

This figure represents receipts through June 30, 1984. By early afternoon today, Universal will provide us with a definitive answer as to whether there has been any income from Ruby-Spears since then. We will let you know as soon as we receive word.

Sincerely,

Douglas C. Fairhurst
